WALES.

We have seen in the cause of missers of religion, residing in Sydney and its suburbs, deem it our duty to call the attention of our fellow-colonists to the insult and wrong inflicted upon the natives of China now sojourning in this country. The absence of any special protest against the maltreatment of these strangers might seem to imply an indifference to the violence they have suffered. To permit a misconception so serious would bring dishonour upon our calling as ministers of Christ, and it would confirm the stranger in his prejudice against the Christian faith.

That there is simple cause to direct your thoughts to the subject it is not necessary we should prove at length. You have seen and heard enough in your several circles, and through the public press, to leave no doubt that grievous cruelty, inflicted with deliberation, has been perpetrated upon these people. The outrages which have required the interposition of a military force, and extraordinary means of repression, are but the natural censequences of that spirit which has been excited in the multitude by inflammatory speeches, founded on the jealousy of hostile interests, and appealing to the satipathy to foreigners too common with the uneducated of all races of men.

The Chinese, though a pagen, are a civilised people.

to foreigners too common with the uncoursed of all races of men.

The Chinese, though a pagan, are a civilised people. Their ancestors were advanced in the more important arts and sciences loag before these were known in Europe. Centuries ago they were acquainted with the use of the compass, the composition of gruppewder, and the art of printing. They are still in possession of the secret of processes which Europe has net penetrated. Their civil policy excites the wonder of the philosopher, and their social conduct shames the contempt for age, for learning, and kindred ties too often exhibited by many of our-people.

ic ie testimony of witnesses whose intercourse with the ness in these colonies suggested their examination re a select committee of the Legislative Council, is relly in their favour. Not only is there among them markable absence of crime: not only do they submidly to the laws, but their demeanour on the various fields has constrained those who have had them in ial charge to contrastitheir conduct with that of many orocans.

their residence among us is utterly at variance with the laws of God.

We warn our fellow-Christians against tolerating the violent passions which supersede the functions of goverament and threaten the public tranquility. The disregard of right extends its baloful influence until it envelopes all classes, interests, and relations. We warn them against the idea that the majority has a moral right to have its own way in defiance of the eternal principles of justice and mercy Against all this it is our duty to protest with all the fervour and earnestness which bell our secred calling. The power to do wrong to the stranger does not lessen the guilt of wrong-doing, nor avert its punishment. The history of God's providence records the blessed results of righteous government and the terrible doom of oppressors. From the days of Pharanh down to the present hour, we have examples of this retribution. Above the proud deliance of moral law, the warning and avenging voice is heard "though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished."

We remind our Christian brethren that the Chinese ar-

"though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished."

We remind our Christian brethren that the Chinese arrived in this country under the authority of British law, invited by the avowed policy of the British Government.
Some of them are subjects of the Queen. Great Briatin has found it her interest and glory to establish colonies and to spread her population in every part of the globe.
She has assumed that the waste places of the earth are the inheritance of all men. Her shores are the asylum of the exile, the refuge of the persecuted, and the home of the free. Her flag represents the cause of civil and religious liberty throug hout the world. Her fleets cover the face of all waters. Her armies break down the barriers which the prejudices of foreign nations oppose to the ingress of her subjects. In harmony with the national policy we claim the soil of Australia, and force the gates of the Chinese empire.

In the welfare of this great convirts the Christian charact.

grees of her subjects. In harmony with the national policy we claim the soil of Australia, and force the gates of the Chinese empire.

In the welfare of this great empire the Christian church has professed the deepest concern. Many efforts have been made to diffuse the light of truth among its teeming population. It has been anticipated that the mighty political changes which have lately transpired within its precincts will open an effectual door to the preaching of the Gospel. And can we see without deep humiliation the display of hatred to those 300,000,000 human beings for whom Christ died? Shall we, while discovery is exploring the recesses of the globe—while consmerce is seeking the riendly intercourse of nations—while the power of Europe is put forth to enforce international laws, and compel retuctant listates to recognise the common rights of maxiking has all we attempt to embody antipathies in our laws which are as opposed to the claims and obligations of our brotherhood as they are to the predicted and triumphant course of Christian civilisation.

A better opportunity could acareely be found to penetrate the Chinese empire with the light and civilisation of the Gospel than by the agency of Chinese brought under its instructions during their residence among us. Free from the control of their rulers, they are accessible to Christian teachers, and open to Christian influence. By showing kindness to those strangers, we could not fail to subdue their projudices against Christianity, and dispose them to friendly relations with the Christian wind. Their lotter home, instead of being charged with complaints of injustice and suffering, would be a virtual commendation of the Gospel to their countrymen. Returning to his country, the stranger would carry in his hand the volume of inspiration, and, with the memory of hospitality and sympathy in his heart, he would be prepared to testing the proper to the country of the country of the country of the proper of the testing of the testing of the testing of the proper o itis people from the house of bondage—where their extinction had been the policy of the State—where they had been subject to consuming and unrequised toil—and after He had by His own Right Arm avenged their wrongs and smitten their oppressors.—He taught them to draw from their own experience nothing but the leasons of justice and humanity. "The Lord leveth the stranger." "Thou shalt not short the Rgyptian, because thou wast a stranger in his land." "For stranger and inhabitant there shall be one law:" "Thou shalt not vex the stranger." The Hebrews were constantly referred to their past suffering and deliverance as metives for compassion: "Thou shalt love the stranger as thyself, for ye were stranger, "Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger for thou wast a bendsman in Rgypt." "Thou shalt not oppress the stranger, for thou knowest the heart of the stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt, "But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be as one bern among you, and thou shall love him as thyself, for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt, I am the Lord your God." The claims of the stranger were placed in union with those of the fatherless and the widow. To them belonged equally the gleaning of the field, the clive tree and the vine.

How awful are the words with which the Almighty enforces these ordinances of justice and compassion." In denouncing judgment against the oppressor he sets forth His infinite majesty and power as "the Mighty and Terrible, who regardeth not the persons of men nor takoth a reward.

We need not remind you that in the revelation of Jesus Christ nothing is lost of the benign spirit of the Mossic law. The record of redemption lays down the grand principle that God made of one blood all the nations of men. Common in their origin—one in their fall—the objects of the sume Divine compassion—they are sharers of the nature of Him who was found in fashion as a man. He lived and died and rose again for the reduction of Jesus Christ nothing is sent for the Him share of th hand enforced by our armies, is driven from our shores? When he returns to his native, village he will find the maintage of the has entered China under the shadow of our the content of t

NOTES OF THE WREK.

Ox Saturday, the 24th instant, the Snail's Bay Regatta (instituted by the residents of that locality and verried out under the direction of gentlemen connected with the Balmain Amsteur Club) took place, a goodly number of visitors being present. There were four contests, confined to gentlemen amsteurs, and the honors were divided amongst the Balmain pullers, no other competitors making their appearance. The races were, however, very well contested, and sforded much satisfaction.

On the same day a match of the same description—the Champion Oars Race—came off on the Parrametta River, near Kissing Point, between Mr. T. M'Grath and Mr. James Punch on the one side, and Messers. R. and H. Green on the other. The match was for £100, and resulted in demonstrating in a palpable manner the superiority of Punch and M'Grath, who must now be considered the best pair of oars in the colony. When the boat of M'Grath and Panch reached the flagship the Greens were about 180 yards satern.

New Gold-Field.—Briche's Ground, Merod.—The land on the left hand side of Married Man's Creek, towards the head of the Merod, the property of Mr. Spicer, was thrown open to the diggers on Monday fast. This is a great desideratum, and has been anxiously wished for many years, the goneral idea amongst the digging population being that it is exceedingly rich. The ground consists of gentle ridges, and is very extensive. The sinking is shallow—in fact, there is an unlimited extent of good payable surface, with plenty of water. Its richness has at vasious times been tested by diggers carrying away on dask nights the wash dirt in sacks, which upon being passed through the cradle on the following day, has yielded exceedingly well. Late last evening we had the pleasure of inspecting a sample of the gold—about $150 worth. It was coarse and nuggety, the rungets weighing from § dwr. to 10 or 12 ozs., all got from the surface.—Western Post, August 28.

Compared with the water-colour galley these are few in number; and they would appear to have been relected as pictures that must command general attach to the respective of any prestige that might of them. shere. There is unmistakeable truth to nature in the representation of the effects of sea and sky on a squally day; there is also great breadth of tone in the treatment. The sea appears, however, somewhat hard against the quiet sky. We much prefer the water-colour painting of this artist.

13. "Apple Blossom, and Primrose."—Thomas Wersey. There is much in the treatment of this subject that remining us of Hunt, whose eminence in his particular walk of art deprives the comparison between a painter in oil and in water-colours of any idea of disparegement. There is exquisite beauty, as well as truthfulness, in the painting of these apple blossoms and primroses, and also of the hyacintas which are introduced. The tender green of the leaves is no less attractive than the more gaudy colours of the flowers.

The sunset effects are somewhat different, but the essential beauty of each is happily realised—the colouring being quiet but effective. 16. "Regent's Park. Sketch."—Holland. A small sketch of considerable merit, but not likely, owing to its position, to attract much notice from visitors.

17. "The Raft."—Figures by J. M. Joy; water-scape by J. Webb.

"Heaviness may endure for a night But joy cometh in the morning."

This is one of the most striking pictures in the Greenoaks collection, and is a uniform favourite with visitors, from the tragic incident of the scene and the sympathy that it awakens. The well-known story of the wreck of the French figate Meduas, in 1814, where a party subsisted on a raft for five days, and when nine only were rescued out of a company of a hundred and forty—the rest having fallen victims to famine, exposure, and mutiny—probably furnished the hasis of this picture, but the imagination of the painter has discarded the particular circumstances of that story, and has realised a scene of almost equal horror. The sun has just risen, and has discovered, to the joy of the unfortunate shipwrocked company, a vessel scudding fast towards them. Some fifteen or twenty people are huddled together on a raft, evidency but a satell remant of the passengers and crew of a gallant vessel. The night has been long and stormy, and throughout it the survivors have been exposed to imminent peril; but they have survived, and rescue is at hand. The varied expressions of the figures represent forcibly the effect which mental and bodily suffering would personifying some predominant passion or sentiment. There is a hard-featured misers, with his hands upon the chest containing the treasure which he will only abandon with his life; by his side is a mother, delirious with watching and exhaustion, and nursing a child who is happily unconscious of the danger. One man has heard of the approaching eail, and without estisfying himself is eagerly communicating the good news; with the young female by his side the "bitterness of death is past," her features expressing tranquil, pious resignation. At the other end of the raft one of the sufferers is dying, perhaps dead; others are energetically pointing to the means of their deliverance, with unrestrained emotion; while one poor fellow appears to be speechless with agitation. But all the anxious excitement manifested culminates in the figure of one of the sailors, who has taken off his own red shirt and hoisted it on a spike to attract the notice of the ship, that she may heave to in time. There is a great deal of poetry in the picture, the harrowing effects of pain and fear on the one hand, and the ecstatic joy of speedy deliverance on the other, being depicted with marvellous power. The accessories of the picture too are scarcely less impressive; the waves represent the dead sluggish heave of the foundess see after a gale; the red and fiety sun, and the ominous gathering of the clouds, show that the weather has not yet settled; and the partial irradiation of the sky is in happy keeping with the feeling of delight with which the "sail in sight" is hailed by the distressed company.

18. "Duck."—Herring. The truthful richly-coloured studies from the farm yard by this artist are well known to visitors to the London exhibitions. The subject of this picture is a Muscovy duck; it is remarkable for the fine colour and dexterous handling which are char cteristic of Herring's style.

ne subject of this picture is a Muscovy duck; it is remarkable for the fine colour and dexterous handling which are char. cteristic of Herring's style.

Bronzes.

Before passing from the room in which the oil psintings are hung, we take occasion to notice some vary beautiful bronzes there exhibited. These were, we are informed, obtained from Messrs. Elkington, of London, whose success in producing bronze casts of the most celebrated works in statuary is widely known. One of the most noticeable of these is a Bronze Dish, representing in the centre "Venus raing from the Occan;" the design, 'especially of the frieze, is extremely elaborate and besuitful. Another work in bronze is a cast of the well-known Laocoon. There are also two fine fac-similes of Florentine statuse—"Milo rending the Oak," and "The Wounded Gladiator;" and a Roman statue—"Hercutes and the Bull;" the minute accuracy of each of which will be at once recognised by those who are acquainted with the originals.

We may also notice a set of exquisite bronze casts of Thorwaldsen's "Dance of the Muses on Helicon, hung along the corridor. The bas-reliefs are ten in number, and are faithful copies of those celebrated works, every touch being reproduced with the utmost nicety. In looking at these casts it is impossible not to be struck with the life and gracefulness of the figures which seem to be actually in motion. We append a list of the figures represented:—Apollo in the character of Musagates, the son of Jupiter and Latons, the God of Masic, Poetry, and the Sciences. Eut-rpe, the Muse presiding over Music and Dancing. Erato, the Muse presiding over Music and Rhetoric, and deemed the inventor of Harmony. Urania, the Muse presiding over Astronomy. Thalis, the Muse presiding over Astronomy. Thalis, the Muse presiding over Astronomy. On either side of the entrance hall are a number of the figures in the seco

Comedy and Heroic Poetry, and also one of the Graces.

Armours.

On either side of the entrance hall are a number of ancient implements of war, representing with tolerable completeness the armour used by the English in the olden time. These relies of mediaval warfare were purchased by Mr. Mort at the sale four years since of the collection of the late Earl of Shrewsbury, at Alson Towers. The most important of these are two suits of armour of the sixteenth century; the Italian suit is covered with elaborate devices, and must have been worth a large sum of money in the days when millitary men went to battle in such equipments. The implements are of extreme interest as illustrating the mode of fighting which prevailed till within the last three or four centuries, and will be found of great value in resisting those who have never before seen such weapons to understand the otherwise unintelligible allusions to them in works of history or romance. With one or two exceptions, the stricks are venitable implements of warfare, and many of them have, doubtless, done good service on the field of battle. A glance at these now obsolcts weapons calls very obviously to mind the complete revolution that has taken place in military tactics since they were in fashion, and at the same time suggests the possibility that the time may come when the Armstrong guns and Enfeld rides, and other implements, on the efficiency of which we now pride curelves, will adorn the mansions of the wealthy as interesting relies of the comparative advance that had in the ninetventh century been made in the deadly science of war. The following is a list of the implements:—

We have now completed our brief description of the numerous and valuable works of art and other objects of interest at Greenoaks, which, by the kindness of Mr. Mort, are periodically open to public inspection. These are, however, far from constituting the whole of the art treasures which he recently brought out to the colony, his collection including a number of choice works in statuary and bromse, which adem the private apartments at Greenoaks; and which are consequently not convenient for exhibition to general visitors. Having been afforded a view of those works, we will briefly mention some of the more beautiful of them.

The "Good Samaritan" is an exquisite group in marble, by Birch, of London, a sculptor who was educated at the direction of the King of Prussis, under the celebrated Kiss of Berlin. The snatomy of the nude figure is considered very fine, while the expression of combined surprise, sorrow, and pity on the countenance of the Samaritan is wonderfully telling. We understand that this sculpture was executed expressly for Mr. Mort.

The "Nubian Slave" is a fine bronze cast, by Elkington, from the celebrated model of John Bell, The sculpture was the object of much attention when first exhibited in London as a striking satire upon Powers" "Greek Slave;" the misshapen limbs and the expression of conscious degradation being so contrived as to impart a plaintive beauty to the figure. The model illustrates the reputation which Bell enjoys as "one of the few modern sculptors when have emancipated themselves from the transmels of the snitique, and in place of servile repetition of a few backneyed themes, and of one fixed type of form and beauty, have achieved excellence independently (to a considerable extent) of precedent."

The "Infant Bacchus," by Bienama, is, for beauty of conception, for delicacy of treatment, and for the pulpy tenderness of the limbs, one of the most exquisite pieces of the most valuable. There are, also, several other descriptions of vases, as well as urns and tazzas of very graceful shapes. Besides these, Mr. Mort has obtained possession of some valuable cabinets, one of which belonged to Marie Antoinette. The cavring of the furniture, most of which was made to Mr. Mort's order, is tasteful and elaborate. This, and also some stained windows by Hardman, and the richly decorated ceilings of the principal apartments, theroughly harmonise with the architecture of the building—the Gothic style of the period of Henry VII. A great deal of the ornsmental wood carving of the interior fittings at Greenoaks has been executed in the colony, so that, in addition to a very liberal patronage of Raglish artists, Mr. Mort has given extensive encouragement to native colonial talent.

4. The directors have much pleasure in stating that the steamship Morpeth, ordered from Kngiand in conformity with the resolution passed at a general meeting of proprietors, a model of which is now exhibited in this room, is nearly completed, and from advices received from their agents in London, it is supposed the was hanched lest month, and, therefore, may be expected to render the vessel in every way suitable from the spend of the little of the late of the little for the party of the little of the li

9. The directors have further to acquaint the proprietors that they have studied strict economy in the general management of the company's business, consistently with its position and standing.

10. It will be the daty of this meeting to elect two directors in the place of J. B. R. Robertson and A. B. Portus, Requires, who retire by rotation, but who are eligible for re-election. The following duly qualified proprietors have given the necessary notice that they are candidates for the vacancies, viz.; J. B. R. Robertson, A. B. Fortus, and G. Vindin, Equiress. Two auditors will also have to be re-elected in the place of J. Wisdom and J. Resting and the control of the control which hereafter, be would recommend some alteration in the manner of voting required by the deed of settlement.

Mr. Wisdow suggested that it would remedy the evil if shareholders, instead of giving an open proxy, would state in the paper the names of the persons in whose favour they wished the votes given.

The Charman then read the number of votes for each candidate from the paper handed to him by the scrutineers, as follows:—Mr. George Vindin, 317; Mr. Alexander Portus, 302; Mr. J. B. R. Robertson, 241; the two first being declared duly elected.

Mr. Vindix then thanked the meeting for the honour done him, and assured them that his best energies should be given to promote the interests of the company. (Hear.)

Mr. Alexander Poatus said he felt honoured by the fact of his re-election, and would do all in his power to justify their choice in appointing him. He had been somewhat late in the field, and had not taken a very lively interest in the election, the result of which, if his own re-appointment interfered with that of Mr. Robertson, he would much regret. In justice to that gentleman, the value of whose services to the company for the three years in which he had been a director he (Mr. Portus) could warmly speak to, he would say that in him the establishment would lose the valuable assistance of one who had been most attentive to his duties and to their interests.

to, he would say that in him the establishment would lose the valuable assistance of one who had been most attentive to his duties and to their interests. (Applause.)

Mr. Romertson said that he was perfectly satisfied with the result as far as he was concerned. He had not canvassed for votes, and was just as well pleased as if he had been elected. (Loud applause.)

Messra. J. Wisdom and J. Kesting were then unanimously re-appointed auditors for the ensuing six months, at the same amount of remuneration as in the previous half-year. Mr. P. O'Kerffe moved a vote of thanks to their late chairman, Mr. Robertson, which was very warmly received by the mocting. The motion was seconded by Mr. Alexander Portus, who said he felt certain that Mr. Robertson's anxious real for the interests of the company, and his attention to his duties as director—(Mr. O'Kerffe here said that Mr. Robertson had never missed attendance at a meeting)—were not sufficiently know a, or, as was shown by the result of that election, they would have been better appreciated. (Cheers.) He (Mr. Portus) would again say that he was not satisfied with his own position, seeing that the company was deprived of Mr. Robertson's services as a director. (Applause.) Mr. Robertson said that although the result had been against his re-election, he could not but feel gratified by the approval of his conduct, and by the kind feelings then expressed. (Applause.) This closed the meeting.

An Anelono Nugger.—For some days there has been on view, in the Bank of New South Wales, Adelong, a most magnificent sugget of smalgamated gold, gathered from the suriferous vein of the Victoria Reef, and weighing three hundred and fifty-six (359) ounces. The nugget in question is all the mre remarkable, being by many ounces the largest ever yet retorted at our machines. The fortunate owners are Messrs. Hillhouse, Forestier, and purty, who occupy an extended claim on the southern extremity of he Victoria Reef. It was the produce of sixty-two and a half tons of quartz, whose excavation had been he weak of eight men for twelve weeks. The stone was reduced at the Prince of Wales crushing mill. The gold looks clean and beautiful, and is valued at £3 17s. 6d per ounce.—Wyngerd Fimes, August 27.

Gundaoal.—The news from our gold-field is still satisfactory. A considerable amount of gold was got lest week. Some parties I understand did very wall. There are rumours of another nugget having been found, but I cannot trace the origin of the report. The population is etasdily increasing.—Wynyard Times.

More Wit Than Monry.—A boy about six years of age entered a shop in Dundes a few days ago, and asked for a pint of canary seed. As he had no money to pay for it, the shopkeeper, to whom the boy was well known, wishing to ascertain whether he had been sent by his parents or by any other party, saked, "Is that seed for your mither, my mannie?" "No," said the boy, "it's for the bird."

Contrary to the first determination of the Chief Secretary, the Pleuro-pneumonia Commissioners have received directions to commence operations again, and Mr. Brock has been appointed in Mr. Oglivie's place, but temporarily and without pay. Of the sum voted by Parliament there is a portion on hand, and the provisions of the Act are to be carried out as long as this lasts, or until Parliament expresses an intention of granting more. Mr. Miscamble's first trip this week was to Mickleham, where he had seven diseased bullocks of one team destroyed, leaving seven more apparently sound as yet.

A Chinese company of quartz-crushers have commenced operations at Ballarat. The Ster says:

"The Hongkong Quartz Company made a start yesterday with the newly erected machinery on their claim, at Prince Regent's. The shareholders are all Chinamen, except the manager, Mr. Simpson; and this is the first Chinese company of this kind organised here. The plant is one of the completest in the neighbourhood, and it worked to the satisfaction of those most interested. The battery consists of twelve heads driven by a thirty-horse power engine, and the plant, including a handsome brick chimney, cost £1900 odd."

A game of billiards was played on Monday evening, at Lewis's (late Cattabemi's) rooms, in Bourke-street, which created great interest among those who enjoy this favourite amusement. The players were Messrs. James Boyle and John Hausman, the stake being £50. The score was 600 up, American four-ball game. When the first hundred had been scored, the game was even; soon after, however. Hausman took the lead, and upon 200 being marked, the betting was 7 to 6 in his favour. On reaching 400 the favourite was seventy a-head, which altered the betting to 8 to 6. At 500 it was still further increased to 10 to 4, and remained at that till Hausman was declared a winner by eighty-six points. The greatest number was made off the last break by Boyle, who scored twenty-eight. The game lasted for three hours and thirty-four Criner Lefels.—We learn from one of the Chinese interpreters that in the neighbourhood of Little Bendigo there is a camp containing about half-a-dozen unfortunates afflicted with the loathsome disease termed "fat hung," or Chinese leprosy. According to our informant, it has been found necessary to exclude persons with the complaint from the hospital, and as the healthy Chinese will not live near the lepers, they are forced to form a separate encampment of their own. It is said that there are two varieties of this malignant disorder, one of which is regarded as curable. The other is described as resisting every known remedy, and as inevitably proving fatal in from three to five years. The Chinese consider the disease so contagious that they will not knowingly handle snything that has been touched by a leper. The unhappy few, who are thus almost cut off from intercourse with human beings, work as well as they are able for subsistence, receiving occasional assistance from their countrymen. If these statements are reliable, they naturally suggest two inquiries—how far the safety of Europeans is endangered by coming in contact with those who are plague-struck; and whether it is creditable to our humanity to let these outcasts live and die without an effort to alieviate their fate.—Mount Alexander Mail, August 23.

Nuogers at Yandott.—We have it on good authority that Hungett and party, of Welcome Gully, near Shepherd's Flet, had the good fortune to drop on a augest fourteen pounds weight, and that at a depth of only nine feet. In the early part of the week Charles Dickson and party, formerly of Clunes, came Remarkable Operation.—Dr. Southee performed, on Thursday, at the Maryborough Hospital, the operation of tapping a cyst in the spleen, and drew off the enormous quantity of 103 ounces of fluid. A large number of animalcules were visible in the fluid. The patient was a young woman of eighteen years of age, a native of Sydney. She first felt the symptoms of the disease about four years ago. The effect of this large cyst was to force the heart from its natural position, pushing the inferior portion of it forward, and of course a considerable external swelling was produced. It appears that this complaint getting rather frequent, this being the fourth case of tapping cysts in the Maryborough hospital, and four cases have also occurred at Ballarat, three in Castlemaine, and several in Melbourne. These cysts are most frequently found in the liver. In the Medical Record we find a series of articles devoted to the subject of hytotide of the liver, &c., and the writer says that the disease may be prevented by not eating mest that has not been well cooked, and by net drinking water that has not been boiled, particularly in the districts where the disease is common among sheep.—Maryborough Advertiser, August 23.

Aurifrancus Transurae.—If the following facts had come from New Zesland, they would have unsettled the minds of half of our population, but as they are from our own neighbourhood, they will not attract more than ordinary notice. Our Inglewood contemporary says:—"On Monday, nineteen more nuggets, the produce of Kingower, might have been seen in the windows of Mr. Hayman's Gold-office, and six at Mr. Watson's, gold-broker. The former weighed from ten to thirty-six ounces each, and five of the latter from five to fifteen or sixteen ounces, the sixth weighing 168 ounces. The prospectors of Frayne's Recf. Whereher is the War in New Zealand an Isteral of a Services Wessey our Wellington contemporary, the Asse Zealand Spectafor, remarks:—"80, then, after all that we have been hearing for the last six months of the necessity of going to war with the Maori king and his party, in order to support the honour of the Grown and the Queen's supremacy, it turns out that the Governor himself does not believe his own words, and he refuses to give instructions to General Cameron to employ the Imperial troops against Waikato, or any other Maori enemies, unless the colony will engage to pay their quots of the expenses. Why, only a 'sw weeks ago, we were led that when a deputation of the colon that when a deputation of the protection members waited upon the fire cololy informat that the settlers must look out for themselves, for this was an Imperial question, and that the General had come to vindicate the Queen's supremacy, and not to fight the settler's battles; and not, all of a sudden, the truth peeps out, and the Governa says to the Auckland members—"Unless you will vote an annual grant of £100,000 or so for the war, it will not go to war at all, nor keep the troops in the country as a garrison, and then you will have no commissariat expenditure." What has become of the Queen's majesty in the hands of her representative? It is valued at the market price of £100,000 a year. If the Governor cean get that sum by appealing to the cupidity of some, and the fears of others, he will prosecute the war, and support the supremacy of the Queen. If the cannot bribe the interested parties of the Grown pocket the imaginary affont, and send General Cameron's forces packing as they came. What a depth of ignominy for the British fire all, to be a tenement or peling farm!" And are we, then, to have human blood shed so freely English blood and native blood—for no conceivable necessity? Are the fruits of twenty years colonization, of the toil and industry of the settlers be made to pay for the consummation of their ruis. For, according to the G

(CONTINUE.)

(From the Sydney Meil, August 31.)

A LAP at the door brought out the mistress of the house, accompanied by her brood of little ones, all fat, chubby, and roey faced, bearing on their countenances the imprimatur of good health. Having mentioned our errand, we were invited to enter, and we found the interior of the domicile even more neat, and white, and bright, than the exterior, for it was the very beau ideal of cleanliness, and care. The tinware which hung from the shelves was polished till it shone like silver, whilst the shelves themselves being of deal, were secured almost to whiteness. The floor, though an earthern one, was swept so clean that it more resembled a single large slab of stone than what it really was; and the fire in the huge bush fireplace was nicely kept in the centre, each side being swept as carefully as the floor itself had been. The hut had been recently whitewashed throughout, and the whole had such a light and cleanly air as strongly to remind me of some of the farmhouses it has been my lot to visit in the mother country, where, perchance, some notable housewife would take such a pride in polishing that even to the iron hoops of the churn, the piggins or the milk coolers would be burnished up till they resembled steel. Unfortunately our man, Tom Collins, who knew all about the cave, and who was, in fact, its first discoverer, was absent from home; his brother, however, would very willingly guide us to the spot. So said Mrs. Collins, and waiting the strival of her brother-in-law, he brought forth a huge jug of milk, from which she desired us to help ourselves; and if Tom and Nat didn't do so to a pretty considerable extent, they made a very good attempt at it, that's all. I verily believe that they would have had impudence enough to have asked for another quart. He at once expressed his willingness to conduct us, and furnished himself with a piece of candle, the interior part of

But Tom was not to be tempted, and that "little bit" struck terror even to my heart, though I was determined upon prosecuting my discovery to the utmost. From the ledge on which we stood, we could only see just two or three feet of downright alippery descent, and beyond that nothing but the black rocks two hundred feet below, and the created waves breaking on them in white foam.

"Follow me," said Collins, as griping a projecting point of rock, he slid down the track, dislodging the stones and pebbles, and sending them rattling down upon the rocks below in a regular shower. In another second he had disappeared, and I heard no smash, nory of torture, so taking heart of grace, I laid hold of the point of rock—oh, if I didn't hold it tight—slipped down the path, shot round a corner, almost breaking my spine with the twist, found my feet laid hold of by somebody, who placed them firmly upon a stone, and then, looking round, perceived that the worst was really over, and that now there was a good plain track running down to the rocks. My admiration, however, was semewhat marred by a pair of thick boots which, coaing rapidly down from above, atruck me somewhat rudely over the head, and as Nat's feet happened to be in them, and, as wanting the guiding hands that had placed me on the friendly rock, they were thrown wildly about, the blows were rather more than I had calculated upon. Nat soon got his footing, and then began to abuse me for getting in his way instead of apologising for his carelessness. We now shouted to Tom that we were all right and bade him follow. As he saw that the thing was done so easily, he hardly liked to jib, so he sang out to us to wait for him, as he was coming. We looked upwards for him with some saxiety, and in the course of a couple of minutes we had a full view of "the boots." They and they slones stopped in sight for a full minute, and we began to fear that Tom had caught somewhere, when suddenly down came the boots and Tom too, all in a lump, sliding down on the hunkers' after the same f

When we had seen all that was to be seen here-abouts, we retrased our steps, the point at which we had discended being the only one by which an ascent could be effected; and no sconer were we on the back track than we missed Tom. Enquiries were mutually made, and then it was remembered that none of us had seen him aince leaving the cavern. I was uneasy. I was fearful that he had fallen down some of the immense crevices that yawned between the vast masses of stone that we had had to traverse on our way; and on our retreat I peered down these as I passed them with a kind of nervous dread on each occasion that I should see his crushed and mangled body lying inanimate at the bottom. We didn't find him in any of these, but just as we were mounting the track up to the first alippery point of descent, we heard Spanker's bark, and looking in that direction saw Tom stalking along the rocks half a mile away, looking for the pathway that he had passed. A cooey from us showed him his mistake and he was not long in rejoining us, whilst Spanker was so elated that he made aspring up the ascending path in the exuberance of his spirits, but happening to jump rather short, and not being gifted with hands to secure a hold, he came rolling back amongst us, and nearly sent us toppling off the narrow pathway, which we were mounting in Indian file, something after the manner in which children knock down the long files of suppositious soldiers represented by bent cards. By dint of some little muscular exertion, and some pushing and pulling at each other, the ascent was successfully accomplished, and we once more stood upon terra firma, for the wast boulders of rock over which our way had been made was certainly notentitled to that designation. Tom was so elated at finding himself once more safe and sound from an adventure over which, from the very first, as he afterwards confessed, he had had the most painful misgivings, that he fired at and killed the first bird that came across him, the victim in this instance being an unfortunate gill-mocker, who had attracted Tom's attention by several times telling him to "Go back," a piece of advice that, in Tom's then state of mind,

Having themsed Collins for his kindness and attention, we once more pushed ahead, the road now leading us across a long level piece of country that intervened between the sea and the waters of Creel Bay, until it brought us down to the margin of the latter. Arrived here, we had before us as pretty a marine picture as ever painter sketched, and as directly opposite to the one we had but so recently left as could be well conceived. The flat level land had here narrowed to some sixty rods in width, being backed by a heavily wooded range, the base of which was here and there encumbered by large masses of rock, from which the incumber of the bay large masses of rock, from which the incumber soil had been washed, and which now protruded inhuge boulders, or lay out bare and detached from their native beds. On the margin of the bay were three little whitewashed slab huts with bark roofs, the passionate squalling of an infant that proceeded from one of them would have given evidence of their being inhabited, even if we had not seen two or three barelegged and barefooted children peering at us round the corner of the house. Through the narrow belt of low swamp oaks that edged the margin of the bay, the clear smooth waters of Creel glistened in the sun, as the gentle breeze swept over its face and slightly ruffled its surface. On the sands, midway between the shore and the retreating water, for it was nearly low tide, two boys were busted collecting shells, by filling an old basket with the sand, and then agitating it in a water-hole, made for the purpose, until the sand was washed away, and nothing was left but the shells that had been mingled with it. These, when washed clean, were thrown into a boat that lay down helplessly onits side close to them. Out on the waters of the bay, floated a smart little cutter, which, though probably only a shell boat, looked from the clear atmosphere, and perhaps also from the fact that she was the long of the content of the part of the pa

JOHN FAIRFAX and SONS.
SYDNEY MORNING HERALD Office, September, 1861.

The Sydney Morning Berald. MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1861

THERE are few objects of curious enquiry in America that attract so much the scientific stranger as the Patent Office. There he finds every sort of invention which may save time, touble, and expense. So numerous are the applications for patents that the fees are sufficient to support the office and to carry a surplus to the Government, the income being not less than £40,000 for 1860. The fees to a citizen trian 240,000 for 1860. The fees to a citizen are about 50 dollars, to a subject of Great Britain 500 dollars, and to any other foreigner 300 dollars—showing the advantage of our consanguinity in a very amiable form!

Nothing is more striking than the adaptation of these patents to domestic purposes, by which labour is abridged; nor is there anything which can more contribute to the comfort of life. Experience has shown that the muscular toil of domestic pursuits may be wonderfully diminished, and it may be remarked, although perhaps it is only uniform with the rest of our social developments, that the very class whose labour is lightened are the least disposed to appreciate the relief.

In the great conflict which has for some years In the great conflict which has for some years existed in Great Britain, between capital and labour, nothing is more impressive than the opposition to the introduction of machinery. Every man, however humble, enjoys the benefit of the new powers which intellect has placed at the disposal of labour. Yet it must not be forgotten that even the introduction of these facilities displaces labour. The suffering and depression of those whose employment is superseded is not lessened by the fact that society at large is the gainer, and that time will repair the mischief which now discoveries inflict.

It has been proposed by some writers on the labour question, that a kind of insurance fund should be created among workmen to secure machinery. In the great manufacturing dis-tricts the working population are aware of the uselessness of opposing machinery, as well as of uselessness of opposing machinery, as well as of the ultimate advantages it affords to the workmen. We have, however, examples still of this opposition. One of the most recent and remarkable followed the invention of the sewing machine, by which the principal work of the boot and shoe trade was much more rapidly finished. In Northamptonshire the workmen resolved to strike. The consequence, however, was the in-troduction of the machine into other parts of the country, and the migration of the trade. One master who had been deprived of most of his workmen by a strike, in consequence of his his workmen by a strike, in consequence of his using this machine—invented an ther which enabled him to dispense with the ordinary process of shoemaking altogether. In addition to the sewing machine, by which the tops were prepared, he invented and patented a machine capable of making up 150 pairs of boots or shoes per day.

There are many instances on record in which strikes have led to the invention and improvement of machinery, which, although for a time lowering in some measure the condition of the workmen, permanently improved the trade. But inventors of machinery run often great risks of their lives. Instead of being regarded as the friends of humanity, they are hated as the enemy of a trade. Happily this spirit is in a creat degree ahated. great degree abated.

In the great strike of last year in London, for the nine hours' system the trades demanded a reduction in time without a diminution of pay on these grounds:—

"The applying of machinery to all the pursuirs of human industry has, to a great extent, rendered the demand for manual labour unnecessary. In our own particular trade it already rips the material, ploughs, mortises, and tenore, and does everything except the bare putting together; and we are warranted in antici-pating further depressive aggressions, and justified in attempting to provide a barrier against future dis-tresses by shortening the hours of labour."

The employers denied that any special right to these advantages belonged to the workmen. They say—"It is implied by them that the benefits to be derived from them that the benefits to be derived from machinery are not the property of society, of its inventors, of those who apply it, but are to be appropriated by those whose labour it is alleged it will displace." The shipwrights, however, made good their demand, not only for a part, but for nearly the whole of this advantage in the important particular. one important particular. "Some years ago," states a witness, "having previously used the old-fashioned bellows, we put up very expensive machinery, when a rule was made by the ship amiths that the iron knees should be ship amiths that the iron knees should be charged by the piece at the same rate, whether made by the old-fashioned bellows or by machinery, so that the profit derived from the capital invested in machinery was to a great extent lost, though the power of turning out work more rapidly was of course a great advantage." In the case of an improvement in the machinery for cotton spinning in Glasgow and Manchester cotton spinning in Glasgow and Manchester there was reason on the side of the workmen. In attempting a reduction of wages in con-ecquence of that improvement, account was not taken of the increased muscular labour required, the workmen having nearly twice the weight to move, and twice the care to bestow. It was, however, difficult to resist this reduction because the great increase of the supply by one man caused a redundancy of manual labour, and the net sum realised by a spinner working 600 or 1000 spindles, exceeded but by little the sum realised by the spinner who watched only 300 spindles, with half or one third of the labour. In this case machinery was much more injurious to the existing workman than in many other cases where his general labour is facilitated, by new agencies in a particular branch of it, and may affect his own trade, that he is benefited by its general use in those trades which affect him only as a consumer. Such are generally by its general use in those trades which affect him only as a consumer. Such are generally aware, too, that any attempt to prevent the use of machinery tends no: to improve the condition of the resident workmen, but to cause a transfer of the trade to some more favourable locality. Nothing reveals more strikingly the important of just views of political economy than the or just views of political economy than the treatment of the subject of machinery. Every tool beyond the rudest invented by man to facilitate his labour, contains in it the principle which has been only expanded in the most powerful and perfect manufactories in the world. Machinery has infinitely multiplied the wealth and comforts of mankind, and there is many any kind of contains the state of the state o weath and comforts of mankind, and there is no man in any kind of employment who does not in his clothing, his dwelling, his furniture, his food—enjoy some of the benefits which result from mechanism. There seems to be no bounds to this power. In many cases it has raised the labourer into an artist, and given an entirely new status and prospect to those who can understand and manage the superior processes of industry. It is to be lamented that arge classer of persons are displaced by imarge classes of persons are displaced by im-portant discoveries, but this evil would be ciminished did not trade combinations fetter the freedom of industry, and prevent men enterng upon other employments when their own are diminished or closed up.

Paramatta River at Five Dock have published a little pamphlet expository of their views, in order to conciliate public approbation to the measure they wish to see passed by Parliament, and have backed up their arguments by a map, which appeals to the eye, and which shews the great advantage the new road would give in saving of distance. The case certainly seems a very plain one. There are opponents to the scheme, but we have heard no arguments from them at all approaching in weight those urged in its favour.

The north side of Parramatta River, westand of Lane Cove, has many natural advantages. For salubrity, for picturesqueness, for fertility, and especially for its adaptation to orchards, vineyards, and orangeries, it is not to be surpassed by any suburban district. Yet, though one of the earliest localities to invite settlement, its progress has been very slow. The want of convenient communication has been the chief cause of this dilatory progress. Owing to the indentation of the various coves on the River, the main North road makes a long detour. To add to this inconvenience, the river has to be crossed by a farry, which is a tedious process, and not always safe. On several occasions it has broken adrift, and when out of repair, as we understand has been the case lately for at least ten consecu-tive days, the traffic is cut off sitogther. It such cases vehicles must be taken round by Parramatts, a distance of nearly thirty miles. Steamers, it is true, ply on the river, but they do not carry vehicles, and a large part, if not the greater part, of the produce of the district comes down by the road. A shorter route to the city is, therefore, a matter of great importance. In the case of a suburban locality, a saving of five miles out o great importance. nine along the road is a very great considera-tion, and this is just what is attainable by cut-ting off the loop of that part of the Great North Road which lies south of the Parramatta River. From the foot of Market-street to the Flagstuff Inn at Gladesville will be about four miles the new route; by the present road it is nine miles. To make this straight cut, four bridges are required. Of this number two have been already erected—one across Darling Harbour y a private company, and one to Glebe Island the Government. Two more remain to e erected, and, as that agross the river would have to be of a wide span, and of a height sufficient to allow of vessels passing under it, the cost of the whole work would be bout forty thousand pounds. If a grant to this amount were wanted from the Treasury, the inhabitants might whistle to get it. However urgent there needs, or forcible their claims, they would have no chance of getting such a sum of money—not even if their number were the moet obsequious of Government supporters. But fortunately the means are available, without drawing on the general revenue at all. The Field of Mars Common would be added to the common their contractions of the contraction of the contraction of their contractions. would, if sold, pay all expenses; and not only would this reserve be easily saleable i the road were made, but other Crown lands also, more to the northward, would fetch a fair price, for there is much good land in that direction, though hitherto it has been neglected from its inaces sibility.

The principle is a sound one of applying the proceeds of land sales to improvements in internal communication. The fund so derived can have no more suitable application. Indeed, spart from it, there is but small justification fo putting any artificial price upon land at all.

It is a sound principle, also, to restore to a district, in the shape of public works, a part at least of what has been levied from that district in the shape of land payments, and we should be glad if the principle could be widely adopted and every district ware through the principle could be widely adopted and every district were thrown upon its ewn resources. It would awaken local enterprise, it would cut away the ground from local complaints of negaway the ground from local complaints of neg-lect, and it would put an end to the disgraceful and corrupting system by which Ministers are besieged for votes of money in return for political support, and by which the highest qualifications of representatives are gauged by their willingness or ability to make a haul at the public purse for local objects.

It is a sound principle also not to treat com-mons as inslienable. During the gradual settlement of the colony commons may be re-quired for pasturage, and be a help to the early settlers in a district. But a period arrives in the progress of settlement when commons cease to be a convenience, and become a nuisance. Their value for pasturage purposes dwindles to nothing, while their continuance in a state of nature is a hindrance to the prosperity of the district. To appropriate a block of land to commonage purposes is, after a certain period in the progress of colonisation, to doom it to the very minimum of utility,—to make it of the least possible benefit to everybody in the neighbourhood—to blight it with enforced barrenness. Even those few who make the most use of it would gain more by its passing into private ownership, for a convenience, and become a nuisance few who make the most use of it would gain more by its passing into private ownership, for then the population and productiveness of the district would be increased, its civilisation enhanced, the value of property improved, and the demand for labour increased. A huge block of unimproved land intercepts communica-tion, and thereby deteriorates the value of ad-jacent properties.

As to the estimate put upon the selling value

note. Frain. Frain, graft, plant, dress, and clean. Keep an eyo to versing. Frain in Frain was properly good and thus rendered upon the whole more productive and in demand. Among the more intelligent workmen, especially of the Field of Mars Common, that is of course of Mr. J. Robertson.—R. Muriel will hold a very important and by prints auction, at 11 of stock, this day, finding of every description of the field of the field of the field of the field of skill, there is no disposition to interfere with and make it less marketable. But in the course returning the highest amount of skill, there is no disposition to interfere with and make it less marketable. But in the course returning the highest amount of skill, there is no disposition to interfere with and make it less marketable. But in the course returning the highest amount of skill, there is no disposition to interfere with invention or prevent the use of machinery. Every man is compelled to admit, however it ore than the district is entitled to.

THE VOLUNTEER PORCES.

A VOLUNTEER review and sham fight took place at Paddington on Saturday, in commemoration of the first anniversary of the volunteer enrolment in New South Wales. The muster was tolerably numerous, the members of the city and suburban companies, being present, pursuant to summons, in full dress. Their appearance when drawn up in the gartiera square was remarkably fine, the grey uniform of the Rifles contrasting pleasingly with the rich blue of the Artillery and Caralry corps; while the vast concourse of spectators which had assembled to witness the review added considerably to the spirit and animation of the scene. The volunteer band formed a special object of interest, not simply on account of their musical efficiency, but from the fact of its being the first occasion of their appearing in their new costume (green, with scarlet facings and red plumes), which was generally commended on the ground, as being at once appropriate and handsome. A finer day for parading could not possibly have been selected. The sun ahone out brilliantly, the warmth of its rays being subdued by a delicious brerze, which kept the atmosphere at a moderate temperature, and assisted not a little to enhance the pageantry of the scene by setting off the colours of the different companies; the flags unrolling their silken folds at every successive puff, as the men stood assembled in the enclosure awaiting the inspecting field-officer, Colonel Kempt. With such insplicient weather, it was only to be expected that the crawd of apoctators would be immense. The ladden, in particular, were well represented; and thanks to the courtesy of the military suthorities, many of them were enabled to get a good view of the proceedings, the garrison beliconies having been surreadered to them for the occasion. It addition to these, a large number availed themselves of the pretty hill in front of the officers' quarters, while all round inside the walls the ground was literally packed with human beings, and vehicles of all descriptions. At such a sad matshe. It is only fair to state that some of the officers of the volunteer force have done everything they possibly could under the circumstances. The poor boy's mother has received assurance that no expense will be spared in procuring him the attendance of the best medical men, which shows that a kind spirit of sympathy exists. Passing from this unfortunate occurres ce, which we hope will not have a fatal termination, we proceed to describe the mititary portion of Saturday's ceremony. On arriving at the Victoria Barracks the two battalions formed is close column, right in front, and fifteen rounds of blank cartridge were served out to each man. The rifles then wheeled into line at quarter-distance column of battalion, with the band in the centre, the cavairy and artillery on the right; in this position they saluted the commanding officer. They then wheeled to their original position, and marched past in quick time—the close column wheeling having an imposing effect. The suburban battalion, in charge of Captain Laver, now left the Barrack-square, together with twe field pieces worked by No. 1 Company of Artillery, and proceeded to take up a position on the ground between the Paddington aindmill and Waverley. The Sydney battalion, with the Mounted R.des, and two gans in charge of Colonel Kempt, left the barracks by the reargate, and secupted the rough ground between the barrack-wall and the military butts. After some little delay skirmishers were throw no uton both sides, and advanced without firing until the lines were within about 200 yards of each other, when they opened a smart fire, which was followed shortly after by discharges from the field pieces on the aliminators of the Bydney battalion and their supports. The skirmishers were now relieved by the supports, and after a short time the Suburban battalion drove back the skirmishers of the Sydney battalion, who retired well and kept up a good fire whilst retreating. Captain Laver brought up the reserve, and as they advanced over the hill they w of the Sydney battalion closed, and were joined by their supports, and sent two volleys into the line on the hill, which were instantly returned. It was now nearly dark, and the whole force marched from their the hill, which were instantly returned. It was now nearly dark, and the whole force marched from their respective positions to a piece of ground near St. Matthias' Church, and those who were loaded discharged their pieces; the whole then formed fours, and, headed by the two bands, returned to their quarters. There certainly was not time for any resilty complicated evolutions, and the sham flight may be said to have been only imprompts; but, from what we have witnessed, with plans properly matured, sufficient time to carry them out, and the positions better taken up, there can be little doubt a very excellent display will be the result. With regard to the accident, we may observe that despite every precaution such will sometimes occur, and no one of the assemblage is in a more dangerous position than the volunteer himself; marching over uneven ground, with fixed beyonets, and stumbling occasionally, it is really surprising that they do not meet with wounds. There is, however, one circumstance which no amount of precaution on the part of the military suthorities can avoid, and that is the practice of people rushing close after and in front of the line of five. This was particularly observable on Saturday afterneon; the files of skirmishers were surrounded by persons who could have witnessed all the operations from the high ground, and not have impeded the evolutions of those who are learning a most important leason, and who are also to a certain extent in some danger themselves.

Newtown Municipality.—A public meeting was held on Friday evening list, at the Union Inn, for the purpose of considering the best course to be taken in reference to the municipal incorporation of Newtown. Fifty or sixty persons were crowded into the room in which the meeting was held, and Mr. Collins was, on the motion of Mr. Gray, moved into the chair. Mr. Kingsbury and Mr. Dunlop addressed the meeting in favour of a municipality, which was opposed by Mr. Meiville. Mr. Lucas then made a speech, which we refrain from publishing on account of its libe lous character. The meeting was very disorderly throughout. There were repeated interruptions, and assertions were several times met with the expression—the is life. The chairman told one of the audience—who had several times attempted to express his opinion by interjections—that it was no use him trying to "bounce" them, and that, if ns (the auditor) were not quier, he (the chairman) would find a man to put him out "in five moments." A variety of expressions were used which, although they might have been considered cruate, were certainly not in keeping with that decorum which ought to characterise public meetings. The following may be taken as specimens:—"He knows nothing about it—he's drunk,"—"it's a lie,"—"sit down, you sweep!" At the close of the petition against the incorporation of Newtown should not be presented to the Government until 600 signatures had been obtained.

We are indebted to a correspondent for the following particulars of the chase, and ultimate capture, on the morning of Sunday, the 25th ultimo, of the blood thirsty miscresnt "Black Harry," at Borah Station near Melville Plains, by Mr. John Humphries, whose tact, and cool determination, in bringing Harry to bay, merit the warmest commendation. The writer peral excitement had existed for a considerable time past in respect to this scoundrel, more particularly as it became known that he would puss labours larly as it became known that he would puss labours larly as it became known that he would puss labours larly as it became known that he would puss labours larly inhabitants of this pleec, amongst whom may be particularly mentioned Mr. Chief-constable Murray, Mr. Alexander Thomson, and brothers, with many more, were on the look out for him, and having accidentally learned, some few weeks back, from a German lad who was out in the mountains, that a blackfollow had passed along at the back of the mountains, mas one of Mr. Johnstone's switch and the labour lab broad size prepared, which he wielded formidably Harry decamped quickly, and went to Melville (cilled Gullindaddee), and was seen by a shepherd on the way. At one of the stations here he robbed the shepherd, and went on towards the Rock Inn, on the Namoi River, which he reached on Friday night, and camped at the corner of the chimney of Mr. Eather's house, along with a blackfellow of Mr. Grover's, named Jimmy, and another beloaging to Mr. Eather, named Combo. Harry sent Combo to the inn kept by Mr. William Greper, for a bottle of greg and a box of sardines; when Combo went up to the inn he told Gosper that he thought Harry was the blackfellow that committed the murder; on heuring this Mr. Gosper and a number of men went down to where the blacks were camped, and on Harry being pointed out to him, he struck some matches and looked at his countenance, saked him if he was a bullock-driver; he replied yes, and aculd hire in that capacity. Mr. Gosper said very well, come along with me and I will hire you, and sleep in the house to-night. The blacktellow said all right, took his coat off, threw it over his arm, and made a bolf, though surrounded by a considerable number of men, and swam the river got to a man's but named Carter, snatched up a single barrelled gun loaded with shot; here three men in the hut stracked him, obtained the gun from him, and though aware that he was Harry the aboriginal referred to, suffered him to escape, he taking to the river again, which he swam. One of the men fired at him, but missed him. On next day, he was seen by one of Mr. Humphries' men at Bow station, robbing it, who immediately galloped in to the head station. This station is between thirty and forty miles from where he swam the river, and directly back again to the place where he left to go to the Hock Ins. Mr. Humphries, who was seouring 125th, when Mr. Humphries, who was souring the bush alone, happened to eapy him squatting in the grass and having a loaded double-harrelled gun concended in a closk on his horse, robe up to him

When the prisoner was brought into Gunnedah the whole town turned out, men, women, and children, to see him, and great was the excitement and expressions of satisfaction at his capture.

After three cheers for Mr. John Humphries, his captor, the crowd dispersed, well pleased that this monater has fallen into the hands of justice.

It is worthy of remark, illustrative of the cunning of this villain, that he had a telescope, with which he viewed closely his pursuers, and was thereby enabled to secrete himself.

VISIT OF MR. COWPER TO DENILIQUIN.

(From the Pusicoral Times, August 23.)

PURSUANT to the resolutions passed at the public meeting of the previous evening, held at the Royal Hotel, the members of the deputation met on Friday morning last, between nine and ten o'clock, in order to wait on Mr. Cowper, who had come up from the pulpose of receiving any parties desirous of seeing him. The Hay deputation having first hadan audience, that representing Deniliquin had an interview with the Par mier about noon. Previous to this Mr. Cowper had invited Mr. T. L. James, solicitor (chairman of the public meeting), to a short consultation, when the Colonial Secretary acknowledged, without any apparent reserve, that the people of these districts had much to complain of; that they had suffered the greatest neglect from the several Governments; he acknowledged that the Government had received and did receive very large sums of memey from the outlying districts; and that the existing Government would do all in its power to make up for past neglect in carrying out such public works as were necessary for the country. Such is briefly an secount of the interview between Mr. Cowper and Mr. James, which we have condensed, as the same subjects were discussed between the Colonial Secretary and the deputation.

Mr. James, as chairman, formally introduced the mumbers of the deputation, and stated the object of the interview sought, and laid before Mr. Cowper a mmorial is favour of a substantial bridge being eracted at Deniliquin by the Government, and a second in favour of our having district courts established at Deniliquin by the Government, and a second in favour of our having district courts established at Deniliquin by the Government, and a second in favour of our having district courts established at Deniliquin by the Government, and a second in favour of our having district courts established at Deniliquin by the Government, and a second in favour of our having district courts established at Deniliquin by the VISIT OF MR. COWPER TO DENILIQUIN.

1. The erection of a permanent bridge.
2. District courts.
3. The union of the post and telegraph offices.
4. Enlargement of reserve and improved impound, ing act.
5. A proper public gaol.
6. A tan-way between Deniliquin and Moama.
7. The immediate sale of some small farms, besides some town allotments.

3. Bir. Cowper reviewed these seristim, and said that he admitted that the people had much reason to complain—they had been much neglected. As to the bridge, he had sen the existing structure erected by thermselves; that certainly was not sufficient, and the Government would immediately take steps to erect a suitable one. The District Court was already settled as they wished; all that was wanted was a court-house, which would be erected immediately. The Judge, which would be erected immediately. The Judge, which would be a court held once a-year at Wentwest spointed, and he would shortly visit them to make the necessary arrangements. He thought that there should be a court held once a-year at Wentwest spointed, and he would shortly visit them to make the necessary arrangements. The deputitions are all agreement of the reserve and an improved impounding set, they were very important subjects. The deputition was bringing him in contact with his friends the equatters, who regarded him in a very coronso us light. He was the enemy of no class. What was required in reference to the reserve? If there were a necessity for extending this reserve it must be done. Individual interest must give way for the public good. He would not like to treapsas on any man's rounding and the state of the character should be carefully made. An improved impounding act was under the consideration of his colleague, Mr. Robertson, and there was no man in the colony better able to deal with the subject. With respect to the gaol, he intended to endeavour to put all the public oblicity in the course of eighteen months were apprehensed by a member of the deputation of this consideration of his colleague, Mr. Robertson, and there was no man in th which he was then vasting should receive its fair-consideration.

Mr. D. G. Jones and Mr. Robertson would be sorry if Mr. Cowper left under the impression that the district offered many inducements to the agriculturist. Many things could be grown profitably that were not grown, but as for "farming" in the proper acceptation of the term, this appeared, they thought, hopeless. Whest growing had been tried, and it had failed to yield much encouragement. He had seen every screed ground in this district which was used for wheat during the last seven years. All experience goes against profitably growing wheat. They could grow almost anything, but it was possible to pay too much for the experiment.

The Alpacas.—The proprietors of the principal hotels in Sydney proceeded on Saturday last, in compliance with an invitation from the Department of Lends, to Livippol, where a distribution of the Alpaca verison took place. Several other gentleman also went for the purpose of inspecting the meat, which they unanimously pronounced to be of first-class quality, the flesh being extremely tender, having a fair allowance of white fat, and very much resembling the flesh of a purely milk-fed calf. It is recommended that the meat should be hung a day or two before being cooked; and it will be seen that the hotel proprietors have informed the public by advervisement when it will be served up.

BOATS IN FLOOD-TIKE.—On late occasions, when our town and district have been threatened with inundation by floods, no small relief to the fears of the prople has been experienced by the prompt strival of several boats with their crews from Newcastle. The good done by the boats at such times has been very great, and, for aught to the contrary that human foresight could discern, they might have been the means of saving many lives. If the water, in the late floods, had risen but a few feet higher, such aid would have been absolutely requisite to prevent the ascrifice of life. It was with some concern, therefore, that we read a letter received yeaterday by Mr. Day, from the Police Magistrate at Newcastle, which states the probability that, in future, the Newcastle boats will not be sent to Maitland. The letter states that "The ship-owners and others interested in the shipping interests of this port complain much that the Government boats are sent to Maitland during the floods, and they very justly say that at these times the weather is very rough, the sea high, and the wind blowing very hard from the south," and that consequently the boats are required on such occasions to render assistance to distressed vessels. It is stated that, on the last occasion when the boats were

HUNTER RIVER VINEYARD ASSOCIATION.

(From the Maitiend Mercury of Saturday.)

Aspecial general meeting of the members of the Hunter River Vineyard Association was held yeater-day afternoon, at the Northumberland Hotel, West Maitiand, Mr. John Wyndham, the president, occupied the chair. There was a rather thin attendance.

The Chairman stated that the meeting had been called at the request of three members, in accordance with the regulations, for the purpose of considering what steps should be taken to prevent certain clauses in the proposed new Publicans' Licensing Act from operating injuriously upon the wine-growing interests of the colony. He said he had received letters of apology from Mr. Glennie and Mr. Windeyar, who expressed themselves in favour of complete free trade in the sale of wine in the colony. He believed they were all agreed as to that. So long as the present restrictions on the sale of wine were in existence, our small farmers would never be induced to plant vineyards. Since that meeting had been called he had also received a letter from Mr. Holtoyd, is which he stated that "be believed the only way of checking intemperance in the colony would be effected by giving the public, and particularly the peasantry, a taste for colonial wines; he entertained no hope of giving such taste to the confirmed rum and brandy drinker." Mr. Holtoyd also stated that he thought storekeepers should be allowed to sell wine in any quantities, at a nominal license of say 10s. a year, and that the Fxcise should be allowed to the wine in the shops to see that the wines were not adulterated. That gentleman had told him that he intended to introduce a bill into Parliament based on the above principles, and he had promised to send him a draft of it, but it had not been prepared in time for that meeting. He then proposed that they should proceed to consider the subject before them.

The following petition was produced, and road by Mr. Carter, the secretary.
To the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, Int

In Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the membera of the Hunter River Vineyard Association

Humbly Showeth—

That in a bill which it is proposed to introduce into the Legislature, intituded "The Sale of Liquors General Licensing Act of 1861," your petitioners are under the impression that, by the 3rd clause of the bill, it is proposed to continue the restrictions on the sale of wines produced in the colony.

Your petitioners respectfully submit to your honorable House that the present restrictions upon colonial wines by the Act 13 victoria, No. 29, have injuriously affected the production and consumption of wines made in the colony.

That the Hunter River Vineyard Association, of which your petitioners are members, have for many years past taboured to bring the wines produced in the colony to a state of perfection than the colony of the consumption of which your petitioners are unanimously of opinion that greater facilities should be affected for retailing wine produced in the colony, your petitioners are unanimously of opinion that greater facilities should be affected for retailing wine produced in the colony, and that instead of limiting the sale of such wine to two gallons it should be procurable in the smallest possible quantity.

That your petitioners are of opinion if the present restriccountries intoxication amongst the labouring classes is almost unknown.

Your petitioners would therefore respectfully pray that your bonourable House will take the premises into consideration, and without made facilities for the unrestricted sale of wines made in the state of the petition, and it was unanimously adopted. The secretary was instructed to have it engrossed, so that it might be signed and for warded without delay.

In course of conversation, a meraber remarked, as indicative of the wide field which the colony presented to the wine-grower, that by the last mail advices had been received of 141,000 gallons of raw spirits being on the way to this colony and Queentland.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.
Wa understand that it is not the intention of the Conference Committee to take measures for the reintroduction of this bill into Parliament. After passing the Legislative Council, during the lest session, it was withdrawn in the Assembly previously to the second reading, in consequence of certain objections raised by the Newcastle Diocese, grounded on the fact that important alterations had been made in the bill by the Council. These objections, it was, however, hoped, would have given way, and that the measure might have been again brought forward with the concurrence of the Bishop of Newcastle, and his clergy. The committee, therefore, through their chairman, applied to the Bishop, who had undertaken to consult his diocess upon the subject, to know whether they might recken upon that cordial cooperation without which it was hopeless to endeavour to get the bill passed. The reply of his Lordship was not favourable, as appears from the terms of the following letter, which they were permitted to make use of in explanation of the course they determined to adopt:

Morpeth, July lat, 1861.

My dear Desn.—Having consulted most of the elergy of this THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND SYNODS BILL.

following letter, which they were permitted to make use of in explanation of the course they determined to adopt:

Morpeth, July 1st, 1861.

My dear Dean,—Having consulted most of the elergy of this diocese respecting the Synol Bill. I lose no time in answering the Nou sale, on behalf of the Conference Committee of your diocese, whether I can now assure them of the hearty co-operation of myself and my diocese in carrying the present Synol Bill through, with the understanding that the alteration which I proposed, of "temporal matters" into "financial," shall be effected. My answer is, that such alteration will prevent our opposition to the bill, but will by no means ascure our hearty co-operation. Not one of the clergy whom I have consulted wishes the prevent consider it the bill of the Conference and, as many of the alterations are in their estimation blemishes, and not improvements, they do not wish to see them nade I aw, so as to become unchangeable except by another appeal to the Legislature. They would much prefer that the future Synol should have the power of altering any details of its constitution.

Your committee have already been informed that the points in the original bill on which I have laid the greatest stress have been climinated from the bill—as the bringing all Church property under the control of the Synod, and the power to examine all witnesses upon outh—while some of the alterations appear to me quite unsuited to this diocess, as the horeased number of largevernment, and which has very few professional or educated men residing in it.

To prevent future disappointment, I deem it right to say that, I me quite unsuited to this diocese, as the increased number of lay members in the Synod of a diocese which is not the seat of government, and which has very few professional or educated men residing in it.

Support the season of the season of the present significant of the present bill with the one alteration already mentioned, we may consider it our painful duty to petition against the bill, if it be injuriously altered in its progress through Parliament; and before your committee determines to undertake the responsibility of proceeding with the present bill, it is desirable you should know that the Colonial Secretary is of opinion that the bill will never pass the Assembly in its present form.

I remain, my dear Dean, very sincerely yours, (Signed)

The Very Rev. the Dean of Sydney.

This letter having been laid by the chairman before the Conference Committee, they passed the following resolution:—"That the Conference Committee, upon consideration of the Lord Bishop of Newcastle's letter to the Dean of July lat, 1861, do not proceed further with the bill which was before Parliament and withdrawn during the last session." The bill, having been intended for both dioceses, and containing provisions requiring their joint action, could not be proceeded with in the lace of the declaration that one of those dioceses no longer desired it.

Coroner's Inquest.—Mr. J. S. Perker, coroner for the city, held an inquest at the St. Patrick's inn, Goulburn-street, on Saturday last, on the body of a Chinnman named Ing Hong, aged twenty-six years. The deceased had been about ten years in the colony, during which time he had been in Bathurat and other places, following various occupations. He had been a servent to the Hon. W. C. Wentworth, and subsequently a waiter at a restaurant in Pitt-street. Latterly he made a livelihood by curing and selling fish, which he prepared in the same room in which he lived, in Durand's-alley. Some time ago he took a vickent cold, which resulted in pulmonary consumpsion, for the treatment of which he went late the Infirmary. After awhich he left that establishment, and went back to Durand's-allay, where, surrounded by tured fish, fith, a horrible stench, and several of his countrymen, who were addicted to opium senoting, he at length expired. The same day a poor man named John Ashworth, of East Mailand, in the employ of Mr. Baldwin as a drover, was on his road up to his master's attation, but when near the Burning Mountain inn, in this district, he was thrown from his horse against a leg—breaking two of his ribs, and otherwise severely injuring his basis, and while upon the ground the horse is supposed to have trodden upon his ankle, and broke the leg close to the ankle joint. After the peor fellow was exposed for a night to the cold he was cared for by Mr. M'Lachlan, and forwarded to the hospital. He is considered to be in a precarious state.

Both—set — and — are at the diggings. Their party have sent in upwards of six pounds weight. Some parties are making good wages. There is a large extent of country appearently aurifarous. There are now, it is said, about 1500 men on the ground, chiefly Otago men, but diggers are beginning to flock from other ports. If the diggings progress at anything like the rate they have hithert done, a complete revolution will be created in matters here.—Melbourne Argus, August 23.

THE NEWCASTLE MINING QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sin,—As the miners' strike is the all-absorbing topic here, as well as the subject creating some little interest at a distance, you may be glad to be informed that an arrangement was effected with the chairman of the Miners' Association this morning for a twenty-cone years' lesse of land—the underground contiguous to the Wallsend colliery, and consisting of about fifteen hundred acres, on the terms mutually agreed upon. The deposit of $100 has been paid to the proprietors as a guarantee of their good faith. It is the intention of the Miners' Association to corumence their operations at once—such as sinking shafts, &c.; but as their plant, rolling stock, &c., must be had from Europe, it will, I presume, be at least nine months before they are in a position to send coal to market.

I have written this much providing you should not get the information from your own correspondent.

I am, Sir, yours respectfulty.

and for two or three successive days at a time he wheeled no coals those days, and for two or three days he earned nothing—so you see the third or fourth day the waggons were empty again, so the coal-getter was wheeling coals again. He might earn 25s, the day he was wheeling, but he had actually been four days in estning it. These are facts—an old saying, "Facts see stubborn things." You can see it is no restriction, but a regulation of wheeling the coals out of the pit. Previous to this regulation the coal-getters could not bosst of earning 11s. 4d, per day, and average one month's work; and, Sir, it has been said by some of the coal proprietors they can send more coal out of their pits under the present regulation than they previously did.

Sir, by giving this a corner in your valuable columns, you will oblige.

LIVERPOOL PLAINS.
That well-known first-class Station,
MOORE CREEK,
Together with 6000 SHEEP, and 110 HEAD of CATTLE.
Terms at sale.

ORT and CO. have been instructed to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on TURSDAY, 17th SEPTEMBER, if not previously disposed of by private contract.

That very choice Station, MOORE CREEK, in the LIVERPOOL PLAINS DISTRICT.

This station is close to the town of Tanworth, and is ta the immediate neighbourhood of the Peel River Company's stations, and also the properties of Messre. Gill, Pringle, Dr. Dow—all stations of established reputs. To all those familiar with the district, Moore Creek will be at once recognised as formerly belonging to CHARLES HALL, Eq., who, for so many years, had the management of the absence establishments of the Australian Agricultural Company. In the driest seasons it will carry 14,000 sheep and 1000 head of cattle; but in such favourable seasons as we have latterly had, it is estimated that there is room for a much larger quantity of stock.

The IMPROVEMENTS consist of a seven-room verandah cottage, with cellar, stable, huts, large wool-shed, garden, planted with choice fruit trees, cultivations paddock, good substantial stockyard, with drafting yard, milk balls, calf-pen, and every requisite for carrying on a dairy; also, hurdles for 10,000 sheep. There are also six out-stations.

With Moore Creek will be sold 6000 SHEEP, more or less, and 110 CATTLE, more or less.

Dray, working bullocks, 10 horses, stores, implements, &c., to be taken at valuation.

This PROPERTY is so well known that any lengthened comment would be superfluous. It is within six miles of the town of Tamworth, where, as well as at the Hanging Rock, Oakenville, and Peel River diggings, there is a ready market for all produce and fat stock; indeed, a large portion of the expenses of the station might be paid from the dairy produce alone.

The fullest particulars can be obtained by application at the rooms, Pitt-street. It is in the MARKET FOR POSITIVE SALES. POSITIVE SALE.

To Furniture Buyers, Rifle Saloon Keepers, Brickmakers, &c., &c.

The arrivals yesterday were the Sovereign of the Seas, from Liverpool, with a cargo of general merchandise; and the Ls Prinie, from Bordeaux via Melbourne, with part of her original cargo, consisting of brandy, wine, and machinery.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER]
AUGUST 27TH.—The escort that left yesterday, taking 4192 ors. 19 dwts. 5 gra., and £600, is above the average from this place, but it must be noticed this escort takes a certain quantity that ought to have appeared in our previous escorts. This escurt and the one that left Yass after the late disturbances, are the two largest weekly, escorts that have are left. the one that left Yass after the late disturbances, are the two largest weekly escorts that have ever left a gold-field in New South Wales (at all events, since 1856), and are sufficient to show the auriferous nature of these fields. Kiandra, last April twelve months, forwarded near 8000 ounces, the produce of several weeks, which caused the greatest excitement in Sydney. Our escorts have gradually increased from 1000 to 4000 ounces weekly, and have in a measure caused no excitement. Had these fields in Sydney. Our escorts have gradually increased from 1000 to 4000 ounces weekly, and have in a measure caused no excitement. Had these fields been managed properly, and the disturbances that have disgraced this place and 'the colony generally, been met by vigorous measures, New South Wales would have at the present time been enabled to boast of a gold-field second to none in the colonies. This field would have been producing from 5000 to 6000 ounces of gold weekly months since. But, instead of this, most valuable time has been wasted. The best of the season for working these fields lost, instead of measures being taken to creet dams, and preserve water for the dry season, little comparatively has been done—our population unsettled—political and Chinese agitators have been constantly plying their avocations, into which they have been drawn, to the detriment of their own interests. It will not surprise any one to hear that, since the news reached this from New Zealand, the intelligent miners who took no part in the late disturbances, and are in the possession of money, made upon these fields, are leaving to try their fortunes in another colony. That such is the case, I can positively state; men in the possession of from £50 to £200—the class of men required upon these fields to combine and develop their resources—are leaving in numbers. Little or no inducements are held out to this most valuable class of men to stop. Whatever may be the ultimate results of the gold discoveries in New Zealand for a time, they will cause a general excitement on all gold-fields, both here and in the sister colony, and should the accounts continue anything like those already received, they will affect these fields greatly. But, while stating this, I do not wish it to be understood that I have any doubts of the permanency of these fields. They may be affected for a time, they will cause a general excitement on all gold-fields, both here and in the sister colony, and should the accounts continue anything like those already received, th

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sin,—So much has been already said and written on the Chinces question, that it appears almost an offence against the biens/onces of society to vex the public ear with further discussion of the dreary topic. Nevertheless it is a subject of much importance; and after watching the course of the great general debate, in which the Herald as usual stood conspicuous for bold advocacy of the views of sound common sense and the principles of justice, I am still inclined to think, with all deference, that the true nature of the question has hardly been clearly represented.

It has always appeared to me, even before the Chinese immigration commenced, that the quite inevitable destiny of Australia is, that the great bulk and substratum of her population is to be Assistic; while we Europeans will constitute a governing, directing, employing aristocratic class. And that the combination will prove to be in a high degree beneficial to both races, and to all classes of our own people. The European, with his capital, knowledge, energy, and skill, and the Asiatic with his docile labour, will together achieve things which in this country would be hopeless to either apart.

If any thoughtful man, a hundred years ago, had pondered on the probable future of the great continent of New Holland, waste and void, but of great natural life-supporting capabilities, and divided only by the feeble barrier of narrow summer seas from the swarming hives of old Asia, in which population begins to press to hardly upon the means of subsistence, would he have hesitated to predict that it was destined to be the outlet and refuge of those struggling Asiatic nations? Adaptation does not necessarily imply design, but he might have been excused i he had declared that the huge waste land was apparently designed for that particular end.

A great event has since occurred, which, a hundred years ago, would have appeared in a high degree improbable, or rather would not have come within the range of speculation at all. First poss abrogate the law that water having vent will find its level?

Such practical communication will have been established as soon as our rapidly extending settlements shall have spread over the abores of the Gulf and Torres Straits. Nothing will then separate our territory from Asis but narrow and quiet channels, facile to every country, junk, and proa. Assuredly, our Northern settlers will not be inclined to repel the indux of useful labour. It is certain that, on the contrary, they will do all they can to invite and promote it. The fact is, that the climate of by far the greater portion of this continent is as hot and oppressive as in any part of the globe. Such that, though the land may be of high natural capabilities, it must remain nearly unavailable to us Europeans, and be debarred from performing anything like its full duty, except under the one condition, of labour from tropical regions.

Within a quarter of a century after the settlement.

Within a quarter of a century after the settlement of the north voist we may safely venture to predict that in Northern Australia there will be millions of Chinese and other Asiatics making the idle desert bloom, under English masters, with the sid of English capital, and of all the mechanical appliances of modern times—achieving wealth for their lords, comfort for themselves, and benefit for all the world.

How will Mr. Partington then prevent the tide of cheap and useful labour from irrigating and earliching all other parts of our examinent? Who will there be who will not desire it? Theories of restriction, exclusion, protection and scarcity—the mere fungi of ignorance—are too patently false to endure, they must wither out in the increasing light.

The Asiatic inundation will not overflow us, but underslow us—not awamp us, but bear us up buoyant on its waves. We are not of the stuff to get awamped, I hope—but formed rather to ride on any hunansurge. Surely we British men are of better pith than that we need fear, any of us, the comprition of races so inferior. They can but serve to lift us on tair shoulders to positions of wealth and power.

My friends the working men—men of true pith, many fellows, good fellows as I so well know them to be, for I have worked with them, ought to be shamed to have so little faith in themselves as to dread such competitors as these. But it is in this respect that they totally misconceive all the bearings of the question. Those inferior peeple, in the order of nature, never can be their competitors, but only their servants. With the enormous advantage which our men of the working class possess, of far superior inherent mental and physical energy, of superior education and general enlightenment, and of belonging to the dominant race, it cannot be otherwise.

Se far from dreading the influx of the inferior races, it is the very thing which our working men and invader and only a deviate the process of contractions of a head.

Few among them, who was not nearly an idiot or wholly a

But it is see our revenue of the tide for a few moments, but it is an insignificant feat, and not worth the paper.

If we once arrive at a conviction that any great course of world-affecting events is naturally inevitable, we are bound to concede that it will also prove to be good. For we may not doubt that, under Providence, or by a law of the universe—choose which phrase you will—the general course of mundane affairs upon the whole and in the long run tends ever unwards of creditions.
